

PRESS RELEASE

Date: 14th October 2007

EXPERIAN TAKES SENECA IN-HOUSE

emis intellectual technology™ are very pleased to welcome Experian UK as a new Seneca customer.

Experian are using the Seneca solution within the in-house legal section to provide much tighter control over file and document management and integration with Microsoft® Outlook for critical e-mail correspondence. The ability of Seneca to capture all incoming and outgoing e-mails and split off attached documents for storage in the Seneca repository was seen as a key advantage and will reduce the work required to manage and organise these documents.

Seneca will provide the legal team at Experian with standardised document naming conventions, a central contact and address book, task and activity centralisation, faster capture and retrieval of relevant case information and the production of comprehensive management reports.

As the solution is used on a daily basis, existing documents are 'dragged and dropped' into the Seneca application and version controlled from this point on. Seneca's design encourages users to bring in information as they see fit and means that there is no need for an extensive data transfer before Seneca is deployed for operational use.

Experian is a global information services company, dedicated to helping organisations and consumers make commercial and financial decisions with greater confidence and control.
