HOPKINS TAKES THE FINAL STEP

Nottinghamshire based Hopkins solicitors are the latest firm to move forward with emis intellectual technology. The firm will shortly go live with Seneca to manage their matters, dictation, accounts and CRM as well as a number of other business critical processes in the summer across all sixty five users

John Bates, solicitor and partner in Hopkins, said:

"We have given this project significant consideration and are glad to have finally chosen Seneca and emis as the winning supplier. We're confident that Seneca will help us do what we do best: providing excellent service to our clients. We're also particularly excited about the truly integrating our environment."

Chris Spencer, Solicitor and Development Director of emis explained:

"Hopkins had already laid the foundations by using Seneca as their central accounting system. This latest step allows them to go forward to get even more benefits including: detailed client files, document management (including emails), and CRM facilities. We're delighted that they have chosen to extend our relationship in this way. Whilst it is always good to get new client's it's even better to know that the existing ones are delighted enough to extend their use of our software"
